A part of the Growing Minds Lecture Series developed by Santa Sabina College.

do kids need schools or do schools need kids?

presented by Dr Maree Herrett

Dr Maree Herrett poses this provocative question about the value of school in the 21st century. In our digitally networked world where both knowledge and ‘friends’ are accessible at the click of a mouse, have kids outgrown school? What do schools need to do to remain relevant and powerful in the lives of our children?

Dr Maree Herrett
Dr. Maree Herrett is Principal of Santa Sabina College. She is a passionate, creative leader who has a willingness and ability to lead students and staff in exciting new directions that improve learning outcomes for students. Her superior communication skills are evident through her professional publications and presentations. She has a PhD from Sydney University in the area of gender and education, with specific reference to the Australian context over the last 40 years. In 2010 she was presented with the ACEL NSW Leadership Award, and admitted to the rank of Fellow of the NSW Branch of Australian Council for Educational Leaders.
